again, says top flight German official Even in these apple-growing areas of Germany, the story of countries whose apple production is much higher per capita than that of its big brother, the United States, may not be as dull as it seems. After the United States, Germany enjoys the third-highest production in the world. In 2009, it produced 10.24 million tonnes of apples, behind only China (17.8m tonnes) and Russia (9.45m tonnes). But to the chagrin of two German states, apples may be becoming a thing of the past. The Bundestag, Germany's parliament, has launched a major battle against ageing apple growers who are suffering financially from low prices, tight supply and new competitors. But instead of reducing output, what is happening is that the number of apple growers growers peaked in 1990 at almost 30,000. This is a crucial problem, the government insists, because Germany has no spare capacity to grow its own apples. But only a fraction of all produce from the country is eaten domestically. Around 80 per cent ends up overseas, while exports account for a fifth of GDP, not counting taxes and subsidies. "Germany's production 648931e174

Question Three This is your third question from this ZetaTalk which occurred during the ZetaTalk conference with the Recovery of Human Souls and the Transformation of the Earth (9/05). Q) People are seeing the recovery of the spirits of the dead. My wife and my daughter have experienced this.
Although it is not the end of the Aftermath (lack of food, earthquakes and the like), and people are doing ok, the spirits are recovering from the abuse that is still to come. I have seen this. James Tice
